Biography

Adele Astaire was born Adele Austerlitz on September 19, 1896 to Frederick E. Austerlitz, a traveling salesman, and his wife Ann Geilus Austerlitz. Adele was born in Omaha, Nebraska along with her brother Fred who was born on May 10, 1899.

Adele began to show an interest in and talent for dancing at an early age and she was enrolled in the Chambers Dance Academy in Omaha, in 1902. In 1905, realizing that Adele's talent would be better nurtured outside of Omaha, Mr. and Mrs. Austerlitz decided that Ann would take the two children to New York in order to provide Adele with greater opportunities to further her performing career. Although Adele was considered to be the sibling with the talent for performance, both she and Fred were enrolled in the Alveinne School of Dancing after Fred expressed an interest in taking lessons.

While at the Alveinne School, Adele and Fred began learning an elaborate number created for them by Charles Alveienne. It was this number that would become the basis for their first vaudeville act. Between 1906 and 1916, Adele and Fred performed in Vaudeville throughout the United States in the Orpheum and Keith circuits. It was during this period that the children began to be billed as "Fred and Adele Astaire" rather than Austerlitz.

While working for the Red Cross, Adele became acquainted with Kingman Douglas, who was then an officer in the United States' Army Air Force. She left Lismore and returned to the United States in March of 1947 and married Kingman Douglas on April 29, 1947. She lived with Kingman Douglas in Middleburg, VA.

Scope and Content

The Adele Astaire collection, gift of Ava Astaire McKenzie, daughter of Fred Astaire, and Richard McKenzie, comprises 9 boxes of material relating to both Adele Astaire's private and professional life. Also included in the Adele Astaire collection is material related to the life and career of her brother Fred Astaire and her mother Ann Astaire. The material in the collection dates from roughly the turn of the 19th century to the time of Ms. Astaire's death in 1981, with the bulk of the collection being from the early 1920s through the early 1970s.

The types of material in the collection include, correspondence, personal diaries, scrapbooks, newspaper and magazine clippings as well as other printed material, photographs, artwork and personal memorabilia.
